

Barack and Michelle Visit Kempton

Barack visited the former Indiana homestead of his mother's family, the Dunhams, with his wife Michelle and daughters Malia and Sasha today.

The Kempton, Indiana, property was once owned by Barack's second, third and fourth great-grandfathers and the house that currently sits on the land was built by Barack's great uncle, William Riley Dunham, who was a Democratic member of the Indiana General Assembly.

Details of the Obama family history in Indiana:

- Barack's fourth great-grandfather, Jacob Dunham, moved to Kempton in the 1840s and is buried at the Kempton Cemetery.
- Barack's third great-grandfather, Jacob Mackey Dunham, was a farmer in Kempton and married his third great-grandmother there July 21, 1853.
- Barack's second great-grandfather, Jacob William Dunham, was born in Kempton February 7, 1863. Jacob William Dunham moved to Kansas, where Obama's grandfather and mother were eventually born.
- When Jacob William Dunham left Indiana, he sold the land to Barack's great uncle, William Riley Dunham, who built the existing home in the late 1800s.
